THE PEABODY LETTER.

The publication a few days since of the fac-simile of President Penbody's letter is still the subject of much comment. It used to be considered a question of pro-it used to be considered a question of propriety to say a kind word of the result of a treatment other than that prescribed by a regular practitioner; and the time was when a man using; an advertised remedy did so more or less surreptitionly. However, this has happily given away to a broader and more liberal view of things, typified in Mr. Peabody's frank expression that he knows of no valid reason why commendation should not be equally as hearty in one instance as in the other.

Certainly this would appear fair in the face of the facts. He was assured that the injury would confine him to the house for three weeks or more, yet in three days' use of the Oil he was out and about his duties as if nothing had happened. Surely a renedy that will so 'practically demonstrate its efficiency and that has stood foremost, as has St. Jacobs Oil, upward of ten years as unapposedable for the cradication of pain, is justly entitled to rank as a standard.

That many physicians prescribe it is as true as that many physicians use it, and it is only those of the very old school who, true to ancient doctrines, can see no good in it, be cause it is made known to the world. Not long since one of these droppeda confidential note to a friend requesting three bottles be sent for his personal use immediately, as without it his hands were 'simply no hands at all,' but," continued the, "For Henven's sake don't say I said so." This, is literally true.
